"Our ears perked when we learned time after time that well-known Drupal sites that we assumed were developed in the US or Europe were primarily delivered from India. And it didn't stop there; we learned that the Indian teams are often responsible for making the CMS platform decisions for all of their clients regardless of country or industry. In other words, a lot of decisions are made in India and it is of strategic importance that the large system integrators have a good understanding of Drupal."

ABOUT CAPGEMINI

We've been working with Drupal since 2007 and believe that Drupal is often the best and most cost effective solution for our customers to build their online presence and business. That's also why we internally chose Drupal to power our knowledge management tool.

We thoughtfully combine onshore with offshore development to assure that the end result is both high quality and cost optimal. To deliver large and complex websites we can leverage our people's knowledge of Drupal as well as our extensive experience with solving problems in the enterprise world. All this makes Capgemini a capable and reliable partner to help enterprises successfully exploit the power of Drupal and its community.

REMOVING BARRIERS TO CONTRIBUTION IN INDIA

LOOKING AHEAD

DRUPAL TURNED 15

When Drupal was born in 2001 ...

Only 7% of the population had internet access

There were only 20M websites (compared to 1B today)

7 million people out of India's 1 billion population used the internet

Google was still a small, private company

.004% of India's population were mobile phone users

Google AdWords, now a $65B business, had less than 500 customers

Facebook and Twitter didn't exist until 4-5 years later

Proprietary software vendors started to feel threatened by open source
